

Transport Training & Planning

Developing workplace skills and improving public transport.

Services available to bus operators

At Transport Training and Planning our aim is to work with the bus industry to help plan and deliver customer focused services, provided by well trained and engaged staff.

Workplace training

We provide training and assessment for the Certificate III Driving Operations (Bus). Training is specifically focused on bus operations, and is delivered by a trainer with relevant and extensive industry experience.

The course is delivered over two years, which allows for practical implementation, observation reports and one on one follow ups between each training session.

NSW Bus Driver Authority training

We hold regular Bus Driver Authority training sessions.

Operators can refer any enquiries for Bus Driver Authority training directly to us.

We can also work with operators to conduct Bus Driver Authority training sessions in your own training rooms or at locations close to your depot.

Bus network and operational planning

We understand that the contractual relationship between operator and regulator requires on-going planning and analysis.

We offer bus operators extensive network planning experience to help identify network initiatives and service improvement opportunities.

We also offer experience in identifying the operational and functional requirements for effective bus operations, including:

- bus layover requirements
- interchange design
- bus stop capacity
- timetables, schedules and rosters

Consultation and communication

We understand the importance of clearly articulating industry concerns and issues, and of negotiating with others to address them. We offer experience in developing and presenting recommendations which are informed by robust, evidence based technical analysis, and which can deliver acceptable outcomes for operators, customers, and transport authorities.

Training details and examples of previous project experience are shown on our website.
